

Handelsblatt

Gastkommentar Michael Heise

Inapt mind games for the euro

27 Jul 2015

“Germany should leave the euro.” It’s back again, the idea of splitting the eurozone into a north-euro and a south-euro. The discussion has been prompted by the possibility of a Greek exit. This is seen as breaking a taboo, instigating a debate as to whether bigger countries should leave the euro. However, such proposals are short-sighted, impractical and devoid of economic common sense.

Full article only available in German

Link:

<http://www.handelsblatt.com/mv/politik/konjunktur/nachrichten/gastkommentar-michael-heise-untaugliche-gedankenspiele-fuer-den-euro/12107176.html>